

Mr. Vernon, April 12—Charged with violating a ruling of the city health board, Rev. Lawrence W. Mulhane, pastor of St. Vincent de Paul's Catholic church here, was arrested yesterday and released upon $100 bond pending a hearing next Monday.

Father Mulhane is alleged to have held services in his church several weeks ago, defying the authorities, who had issued an order closing all schools, churches and places of business because of an epidemic of influenza.

Ethel Barrymore.

Ethel Barrymore, known here and abroad as America's foremost actress, had added fresh laurels to her already long list of successes in her latest screen play, "The Divorcee," a Metro production which will be the attraction at the Auditorium on Sunday for a one day engagement.

"The Divorcee," is a screen adaptation of W. Somerset Maugham's "Lady Frederick," a stage play in which Miss Barrymore created the leading role in America and which was also a big London success.

This distinguished actress comes from a long line of famous players, her father was Maurice Barrymore and her mother Georgie Drew-Barrymore; she is also the niece of John Drew. In this manner her wonderful dramatic talent is her rightful heritage. Following in the footsteps of her famous ancestors she entered upon her stage career at an early age and played in a number of international productions while a member of the Empire Stock company with John Drew and Maud Adams, under the management of Charles Frohman. Her talent was so apparent that she was soon starred by Mr. Frohman in "Captain Jack of the Horse Marines," "Cousin Kate," and "Sunday," followed in rapid succession, both being noted successes. In London she was welcomed with open arms, both for her remarkable talent and for her rare personality.

Like all other players Miss Barrymore decided to give some of her time to the screen and her work in this line has been exclusively with Metro.

Fatty Arbuckle.

Itoycoc (Fatty) Arbuckle is the added feature at the Auditorium tomorrow and Monday. This is one of his late comedies and will not be seen at any theatre in Newark but the theatres controlled by Mr. Fenberg.

"Selfish Yates."

An evening in a new and novel characterization, Wm. S. Hart, the popular Thomas H. Ince, Artercraft star, was seen in "Selfish Yates," his latest production, at the Auditorium theatre yesterday. The presentation was witnessed by a house that packed the theatre from pit to dome, and as usual with the Hart photoplay, the picture scored a decisive triumph.

"Selfish Yates" is a dive keeper and saloonist in Thirsty Center, a mining town in the mountains of Arizona. One day Mary Adams, with her little sister, Betty, drives into the town in a prairie-schooner. Yates is annoyed at their intrusion mainly because he realizes that Mary is a woman, who has nothing in common with the bedizened degraded females who frequent his dance hall.

"Rocking Chair" Riley, Yates' associate, whose evil eyes glisten every time he meets Mary, has resolved to make her his prey. A young man, who has been shot while attempting to rob a Mexican of a flask of liquor, after he had been refused liquor by "Selfish" Yates, is brought into the dance hall where the funeral takes place. Under the compelling eye of Mary, Yates officiates at the service and leads the singing while Mary plays the accompaniment. Suddenly Yates realizes that he loves Mary and the knowledge secretly enrages him, because he knows that he is no longer master, but the vassal of a woman.

Yates, who had slunk to the cabin to get a secret glance at Mary, learns of the trick played upon her, and starts in pursuit. On finding Mary in Riley's arms, he knocks the man down and would have killed him, but for the intervention of Mary, who pleads for him. Mary swoons and Yates carries her to his shack, where brain-fever develops. Yates returns to the saloon, finds Riley and when the story of his perfidy is made known, a mob attempts to lynch him. In conformance with his promise to Mary to protect Riley, he assaults him to escape in a fierce storm and Riley falls to his death in a canyon.

Other features on Manager Fenberg's bill included Pathe News, full of latest world events.

FILM LIBRARIES.

The idea of libraries of educational motion pictures is gaining much support. The government is already doing a good deal in this line. Many people feel it should do much more. Thomas A. Edison, in a recent magazine article, says the government should have great libraries of educational films to be used in school work. He would have these available so they could be had in any school anywhere. He thinks there are a great many slow minded children who could get ideas in this way that they could never obtain through books.

The time will come when all public libraries will carry a department of educational moving pictures. Picture machines and films will be produced at moderate prices and will become common in schools and churches. History, geography, social science, community spirit, the Bible, and many other subjects will be taught in this way.

Moving pictures are destined to be one of the world's great educational forces. They convey ideas more vividly than any other method. They arouse emotion and enthusiasm. They form deep impressions that profoundly influence people.

These pictures performed a tremendous service during the war. They helped people who do not read much to understand the reasons for the war, secure a splendid support for the war efforts.

In the same way moving pictures can be used to help on all community causes. Chamber of Commerce can use them to arouse interest in business enterprises. Village improvement societies can employ them to show what other communities are doing in beautification. The power of this form of instruction should be realized, and a great system built up for supplying educational pictures for public and school use all over the country.

The only thing found by the soldiers "over there" that seems American, is the high prices.

Perhaps the danger of Bolshevism is exaggerated in a land where apple pie is so plentiful.

NEED THIS SPRING

OF A Good Tonic Medicine. Nerve Builder and Blood Purifier

Is greater than ever before. The nervous strain, worry and anxiety caused by the war. The debilitating effects of the terrible influenza, grip and pneumonia. The depletion of the blood by in-door life in winter.

Have tremendously overdrawn the reserve strength of nearly every man and woman.

This makes the favorite Spring medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, more of a necessity now than ever before.

For your impure, exhausted blood, and for that extreme tired feeling sure to come, prepare yourself now. Today begin to renew your lost strength by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, the standard Spring medicine and blood purifier, which creates a keen appetite, aids digestion and assimilation. Remember Hood's Pills if you need a mild laxative.—Adv.

STABILIZING LABOR.

In a recent strike of house painters for more pay, the claim was made that these men were entitled to higher wages because their employment was so irregular. The painters said that though they asked $6.00 per day, even at that they would not average over $1,000 a year, owing to irregularity of employment. They claimed that in winter they are laid off a great deal of the time.

In so far as that condition exists in any trade, it must make the work of that trade cost higher to the public.

In construction projects people wait until business conditions are just right, when everyone rushes in to have work done. The cost would be less if the people had faith to keep building right along, whether immediate prospects good or not. In the painting and decorating and paper hanging trades, costs would be less if more people would have work done in the winter, instead of waiting for the spring rush.

The tendency of people to buy certain goods at certain times of the year, and to demand them at once, works in the same direction. If they could foresee needs, and order in advance when demand is light, it would regularize labor, and make production costs less.

One occupation exceedingly difficult to stabilize, is that of the farm hand. Millions of men are needed as farm workers in summer, who may not be needed in winter. Economists should devise some plan by which these men could be employed at some vital form of production during the winter. Many of them are idle or half employed during the off season. If they could then be turning out some staple goods a year in advance, it would be clear gain to the community.

PRACTICING ECONOMY.

The Ohio State Journal carries this very illuminating comment on the "economy" practiced by the esteemed legislature, which Republican press and leaders assured us last fall was necessary to the well being of the commonwealth:

"I noticed in the Ohio State Journal news of a very economical move by our legislature in the reduction of the elevator men of the statehouse, people who are constantly at the mercy of the public, and a proposed increase of the judges, who are starving along on $500 or $600 per month, to $800 or $900 per month. This action reminds me of a member of our school board a few years ago, when wages rose to $1.50 per day, who proposed to make a financial house cleaning by cutting all wages, beginning with the teacher. When asked his reasons he replied that the proper place was to begin at the bottom. In my opinion this method has been practiced long enough and we should try beginning at the top a while."

There is a large number of people who can't afford to take any of the next Liberty Bonds, as they need the money to lose in oil stock speculation.

Some of the women who demand equal pay with men may wear hobble skirts in which they have to take ten inch steps around the office.

MIRACLES.

(Collier's Weekly)

Wireless telephones—airplanes soaring at 120 miles an hour—transatlantic flying—the plays of Shakespeare—there are so many things to marvel at we hardly know whether to be amazed by everything or by nothing. The wireless telephone seems to the unscientific almost the peak and summit of amazement; yet it is any more marvelous than the miracle every parent knows—that of a child first learning to talk? How and by what incredible magic does that small brain, so immature a few months earlier, grasp the astounding inconceivable process of translating its consciousness into our complex and arbitrary symbols of speech? A few months ago the child and its puppy playmate were apparently on an intellectual par. What secret essence lies in the child's mind that leads it on to talk while the dog stays dumb—in our language at least? Explain the miracle of a child learning to talk, and we will be content to take the wireless telephone as a mere trifle in astonishment.

ALBERT IN PARIS.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer)

King Albert has come to Paris to plead with the council of four to save his country. He is the first king to be led in person before the might commanders. It is fitting and admirable that Albert to present Belgium's petition. He is the kindest of kings, and truly represents the noble spirit of the Belgian nation. In 1914 Belgium saved Europe. Now Belgium's king begs that the representatives of the great nations that were saved by Belgian heroism take some definite action to save Belgium. For Belgium believes that the time for promises, which have been given with magnificent liberality for four years and more, is past. Belgium cannot repair with promises the damage wrought by the vindictive Hun.

Belgium's demands are not exorbitant. She asks for $2,000,000,000 as an advance payment of the German indemnity. She asks that Great Britain and the United States at once begin exporting to Belgium parts and raw materials needed for reconstruction. The king has come to tell the council of four how urgently Belgium is in need, and to beseech that there be no further delay.

Were there no other reason for hastening the conclusion of the discussions, this plea of the Belgian king should be sufficient spur. For long we have talked of our gratitude to Belgium. Now is the time to indicate that it is something more than all.

"Things are not always what they seem," quoted the Wise Guy. "The bass drum may be a deception but is never a snare," replied the Simple Mug.

THE ADVOCATE'S FAVORITE IDOL

That patriotism which, catching its inspirations from the immortal God, and leaving at an immeasurable distance below all lesser, groveling, personal interests and feelings, animates and prompts to deeds of self-sacrifice, of valor, of devotion, and of death itself—that is public virtue; that is the noblest, the sublimest of all public virtues.—Henry Clay.

Did You Know
That Henry Clay was born April 12, 1777, in Hanover county, Virginia? He was elected to Congress in 1806 and again in 1809. In 1811 he was sent to the House of Representatives where he was immediately elected Speaker. In 1814 he was one of the commissioners sent to sign the treaty of peace at Ghent. Clay was the author of the famous "Missouri Compromise," restricting slavery to the southern states, and also of the compromise of 1850, known as Clay's "Omnibus" measure. It was a bitter disappointment to him when he failed of the Whig nomination for the Presidency in 1840. Though haughty and serious, Clay delighted in anecdote and was a man of unrivaled eloquence, supreme ambition, innate patriotism, commanding presence and great magnetism. He knew how to make and keep friends. He died in 1852.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS
BY HENRY VAN DYKE
Formerly U. S. Minister to the Netherlands

We have no right to discuss this great question of a League of Nations in the irresponsible, selfish, detached, not to say dislocated manner of certain senators who frankly ignore all moral considerations. America is first in our hearts, but America does not stand alone in the world. It was Germany whose statesmen proclaimed that a nation has no ethical obligations, that the moral law is not binding in politics, that a nation has no duty to keep its word. Our own great leaders have always abhorred this abominable doctrine, and the people of the United States have upheld them. The American doctrine is that nations have moral responsibilities not only to God but to one another. There are certain obligations of good faith and fair dealing which are as valid in national as in personal life.

All of our greatest presidents have acknowledged this in explicit terms—none more clearly than Washington, whose farewell address has been so often quoted and misinterpreted in this debate. No where in that address will you find a warning against "entangling alliances." Washington never used that phrase. What he warned us against was permanent alliance with one party or another in a conflict of European interests. But this is precisely what our entry into a league of all free nations to maintain peace would prevent. There fore, Washington would have been in favor of it, had it been presented, just as he would have ridden in an automobile had it been invented.

Consider one paragraph from his address: "It will be worthy," says he, "a free, enlightened, and, at no distant period, a great nation, to do what mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a people always guided by an exalted and benevolence."

Precisely so. The idea of a League of Nations is based upon justice and benevolence. For our support of that idea we have a threefold responsibility. 1. The one responsible, in the words of "The Star-Spangled Banner," to "The Power that hath made and preserved us a nation." Ability is always the measure of responsibility. I doubt not that the reason why God has committed such great influence to America, is in order that she may bear her rightful share in this glorious task. The power which He has given to us is not of one talent, but of ten talents. All the more shame to us if we hide it in the napkin of indifference, or bury it in the deep hole of national selfishness. All the more honor to us if we use it aright, and follow Washington's advice by giving to the world the example of a great republic devoted to justice and benevolence.

2. We are responsible for our entry into a League of Nations to our soldiers and sailors who have won this war against war. How gloriously they fought! How much we owe them! I was speaking some days ago from the rear platform of the car to a crowd of men in a little town in Montana. I asked the question, "What did our boys fight for in this war?" An old, gray-haired workman in the crowd answered, with a strong German accent, "To smash de Kaiser. I like to kill him myself." A sturdy young fellow in khaki beside him said, "We fought to make peace on earth."

Both answers were correct. The first object has been fulfilled at least in part. "Der Kaiser ist kaput." But the second object has not yet been fully attained.

Who that has seen war face to face as I have seen it, the wrath and horror of it on the fighting line, the cruel wreck and anguish of it in the ruined towns and wasted countries of France and Belgium, the indescribable pain and torturing of it in the faces of the bodies of the innocent non-combatants who have been its victims—who that has looked in the red eyes of war and felt its hot and fierce breath upon his cheek, can wish to see it perpetuated or even tolerated among the children of men?

Our boys in khaki and blue have faced danger and death beside the allies to put an end to war. If we rob them of the prize for which they fought, we make their victory vain. We must keep faith with them. We must do what we can to insure what so many of them died to win, by taking our part in the League of Nations to Enforce Peace.

3. The United States is responsible to the Allied Nations for a hearty support of such a League as is proposed, such a covenant represents the principle to which we have practically pledged ourselves when we entered the war beside our brave Allies, Great Britain, France, Belgium and Italy. They counted upon us, they welcomed us as representatives of just this idea, namely, that the war of 1914, begun by Germany, was what so many of them called the war of the future, the war of the world, involving consequent crimes of cruelty and barbarism and general atrocity by which at last America herself was invaded in her sovereign rights and attacked in the lives of her citizens.

It is to make a world in which such crimes should be, if not absolutely impossible, at least more difficult and more dangerous in the future, that we took up arms at the call of the President. If now we turn back from the duty which victory has brought to us and to our Allies, we shall be deliberately taking its stand beside Germany in the assertion that "war is a biological necessity," and that we can do nothing to prevent or lessen the danger of it. What a shameful position that would be! How dark for our national honor would be the future, if by a refusal to meet her full responsibility in securing the fruit of victory in this war, America should alienate her true Allies, and when trouble comes again up on the world, should find herself without a friend except Germany! Shall the opponents of the League of Nations, some of whom have a taint of pro-Germanism on their previous records, force or lead our country into this disgraceful attitude? No, a thousand times no. Let America assert and magnify her sovereignty by fully meeting her responsibility. Let her be not a recreant, but a true leader among the nations who seek to devise better things for the world. Let her raise a new banner of internationalism or Bolshevism or militarism. But let her carry her own national flag, the Stars and Stripes, forward in the front rank of those countries who bind themselves together in solemn league and covenant with each other and with God, to uphold and maintain "peace on earth to all men of good will."

ence with the mails in the Chicago railroad strike. He defied the injunction. On July 19 he was arrested. He was convicted of contempt of court. The Chicago Federation of Trades, and the Knights of Labor, then a power in the whole country, called out their men as a protest. So few responded as to make the call a joke. Debs' conviction was confirmed by the supreme court in May, 1915, and he served six months in prison. But five times since then he has run as the Socialist candidate for president of the United States on the strength of his "marrydum" votes. In 1912 he got precisely 89,544 votes. In 1916 he got 1,000 votes. Since 1914, the Chicago Federation of Labor, which then refused more than nominal assistance to Debs, is now the dominant union factor. The Knights of Labor as a power have passed away. We may doubt, then, whether Debs could start up a general May day strike. That agitation will continue is certain. That clamor from President Wilson will be asked, almost demanded, we have no doubt. If it were not for the record of the Munich case in San Francisco, we would have more confidence that the appeal will be unavailing. That is a sobering reflection.

Mrs. Mugger: "I wonder if that Chicago woman has a husband?" Mrs. Buggins: "Let me think. She has been married five times and divorced four. Yes, she must be one."

We may still have respect for old age, in spite of the fact that it isn't wanted on the firing line.

Mrs. Glenn Stowell was hostess to the Progressive Embroidery club, Wednesday afternoon at her home in Hoover street. A pleasant afternoon was spent in needlework and a contest in which Mrs. Morgan Devore and Mrs. J. Farrer were the lucky contestants. Refreshments were served to members and guests. Mrs. Joseph Robe, Mrs. Paul Sachs, Mrs. J. Farrer, Mrs. Herbert Nell, Mrs. Homer Batch, The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Walter Freese, April 30.

Friday being the birthday anniversary of Edgar Fowler, the family planned and carried out very successfully a surprise for him. A three course supper was served at 6:30. The table was beautifully decorated with roses and snapdragons, the main feature being two large bird cakes.

Those present were: Messrs and Mesdames Will Baker, Will Clugstone, Geo Weekly, Misses Stella Davison, Mary Murphy, Bessie and Gertrude Fowler, Mrs. Katie Fowler, Frank Taylor, John Mast, Willis Smith, Edgar Fowler and Francis Davison. Mr. Davison having just returned from overseas. Mr. Davison gave some very interesting accounts of his experience. The evening was spent in games and music. Mrs. Clugstone gave some delightful numbers on the piano.

ABOUT PEOPLE

Mrs. H. C. Rugg, 46 Stanberry street, was taken to the City hospital, Friday. Among those attending the funeral of J. Edward Ingram, were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ingram, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ingram, Mr. Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ingram and son, Rob. Mr. and Mrs. Adie Ingram of Columbus, and Mr. and Mrs. John McNamara of Wheeling, W. Va.

Dr. Eugene Wells, of Chicago, is visiting at his home here, for a few days. Andrew Taft of Henderson avenue, has left for an extended tour of the west. He expects to return June 1.

Mrs. Lottie Kuhn, who has been very ill at her apartment in Hudson avenue with influenza, is improving. Mrs. Clifford Shrader and little son of Wadsworth, are the guests of Mrs. Shraders sister, Mrs. Ray Wintermute. Mrs. William E. Winters and Mrs. C. A. Hill were in Columbus, yesterday.

OHIO FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS

Not Found Wanting. Miss Anna B. Johnson, of Youngstown, past state federation president makes an earnest appeal to club women for Americanization of the foreigner by education and religious instruction, thus implanting the ideals of American democracy. She emphasizes the fact that the state federation was put to the test during the war in doing things and it stood the test admirably as every one knows.

Mrs. Prentice E. Rood, of Toledo, state president, in her address before the various district meetings, gave some helpful pointers, making suggestions for club work and the manner in which city councils and the men in power can be reached. There is nothing women can not accomplish in the way of moral reforms, housing betterment and civic improvements, if they go after it and persist in a pleasing way until it is granted, she declared. Never to show anger but to keep sweet under the most trying circumstances is her chief motto. She urged women to work for the passage of needed legislative measures, one of which was to prohibit forever teaching of German in the public schools. She also urged a boycott on "Made-in-Germany" articles by the thousands of women who are members of clubs throughout the United States.

Mrs. Rood sounded a timely warning to women to beware of articles bearing the words "Made in Switzerland," the Swiss trade mark being used by a number of German manufacturers to fool the Americans.

Visiting Nurses. In many Ohio cities visiting nurses are maintained by city councils, chamber of commerce and by boards of education. In some Ohio cities councils and school boards refuse to maintain visiting nurses. Their "alibi" is that they have not sufficient funds. Mansfield recently staged a campaign whereby the sum of $6,000 was raised for extended work by the Mansfield Visiting Nurse association. In Marion, Zanesville and Fremont federated club women maintain visiting nurses. In a number of other cities federated clubs contribute to this fund.

Children's Health Clinic. The Bucyrus City Health department has plans under consideration for a permanent children's health clinic and dispensary; also for a general clean-up campaign in the Crawford county seat. The committee has gone on record commending Sheriff Knappenberg and former Sheriff Stuckman for their efficient and valuable co-operation with the government officials in a recent vice raid.

Charities at Zanesville. At Zanesville federated club women support for all children's play grounds a health nurse during the summer months. Both of these charities reach a great many foreigners, according to a report made by Mrs. Edmund C. Bush, president of the city federation there.

Rural Club's Activities. The Clover Leaf club, federated with Greenville city federation, is the only rural club in the Middle-West district. The members meet all day every two weeks, do Red Cross work in the forenoon and have a literary program in the afternoon.

Roosevelt Memorial Fountain. Club women should bear in mind that the first great opportunity conservationists and bird lovers have had to give concrete expression of their ideals in some prominent work of art is here, and that it is all in the name of Theodore Roosevelt, who aroused the nation to the need of conserving our natural resources and made the word "conservation" a household word in America. Forward all contributions to the Roosevelt National Memorial Fountain committee, No. 1974 Broadway, New York City. Club women are asked to do all they can to advance the interests of this worthy project.

Kindergarten and Clubs. Whenever there is anything very important to be done club women are asked to take a conspicuous part. That is why those who are interested in securing the benefits of kindergarten training for all little children are turning to the women's clubs. The kindergarten trains the child by example, influence, experience—through both work and play association. Its method is within the child's ability.

BAVARIA WON'T GET ALLIED FOOD STUFFS

(Associated Press Telegram)

Berlin, April 12.—A special dispatch from Bamberg to the Vossische Zeitung says that the German government has announced that the entire foodstuffs have informed it that Bavaria is not to be included in the collection of peace and that measures will be taken to prevent any entire foodstuffs from reaching Bavaria.

ASK MERCHANTS TO SUPPORT NEW LOAN

A meeting of the merchants of the city was held at the Chamber of Commerce on Friday evening. Messrs. W. C. Metz, Fred M. Black, C. H. David and E. C. Wright of the Victory Loan organization attended the meeting and presented the need of supporting the floating of the loan.

The merchants adopted a resolution pledging their support to make the sale of the bonds a success throughout the country.

VANDALS RUIN BED OF EASTER FLOWERS

Mrs. Louis Vogel of Wilwood avenue suffered the loss of a great amount of Easter flowers last night, when some children raided the flower bed, pulled all the blooms. That it was the work of a child was shown by the footprints in the soil, and the suggestion is made that when children come home with a number of flowers, inquiry should be made where they were obtained, so the practice of stealing flowers may be discontinued.

New York, April 12. Cuts, steels, motor specialties and several of the popular fund and stock issues showed movement to higher levels at the opening of today's stock market, gaining 1 to 1 1/2 points, while shippings and tobaccos represented the uncertain or irregular shares. Buyers of Bethlehem Steel, Sinclair Oil and corn products indicated recent short interest. United States Steel received a nominal advance but buyers eased slightly. The one distinctly heavy stock was Samson tobacco which declined almost five points.

Stocks were firm to strong at the opening of today's session, but prices were a good deal further set back by a wave of selling in the afternoon. Steel, shippings, motors and tobaccos at extreme reactions of 1 to 6 points. Bidding up of active oils, metals, accessories and food issues proved only a partial offset, standard shares, including railroads, showing no change from their recent uncertain movements.

Trading based on the market declined the total being the smallest of any recent week-end. The closing was heavy. Sales approximated 500,000 shares. Dealings in bonds were light with a steady undertone.

Chicago Live Stock.
Chicago, April 12. Cattle, Bureau of Markets—Hogs receipts 4,000; market closing weaker than opening; generally strong at yesterday's average; top 20.00. Bulk of sales, 20.50-20.55; heavy weight, 20.45-20.60; mediumweight, 20.00-20.05; light weight, 19.35-20.45; light weight, 18.00-20.25; sows, 18.10-19.20; pigs, 17.10-17.40.

Cattle receipts 1,000, compared with a week ago, good and choice beef steers, mostly 10c lower; others 25 to 10c lower; best she stock 50 to 75c lower; canners and cutters and top-priced she stock, mostly 10c lower; 25c lower; calves, 1.00-1.15 higher; fleshy feeders and common stockers slow and steady; all others 25c higher.

Sheep receipts 3,000, practically all direct to packers; compared with a week ago, quotations show a decline generally as follows on wooded stock: lambs and light yearlings, 75 to 1.00; wethers and heavy yearlings, 25 to 50c; ewes, 25c; shorn lambs, 50c lower; shorn sheep, 25c lower.

Chicago Grain Review.
Chicago, April 12. Higher prices for corn noted today, ranging from 14 to 15c higher in country offerings and from a report credited to the food administration that U. S. surplus wheat harvested during 1919 would be disposed of without losing little, if any, of the $1,000,000,000 guaranteed fund for wheat. Higher prices for corn, quotations which ranged from 14 to 15c higher with May 1.50 to 1.55 and July 1.51 to 1.51 1/2 were followed by a slight further gain and then something of a reaction.

Corn bulged with corn. After opening 14 to 15c higher with May 68 1/8 to 68 3/8, the market continued to show strength.

Provisions were active and higher owing to improvement in the export situation. Packing interests were conspicuous buyers.

GETS JUDGMENT FOR $566 ON RENT ACCOUNT

In the case of O. M. Tucker executor vs. Nicholas Criticos, which was heretofore submitted to Judge Blair upon the testimony, the court rendered a judgment for the plaintiff in the sum of $566. The suit was brought upon a claim for rent.

In the case of Crane-Krieg Co. vs. J. L. Baldwin, a suit upon an account, the attorneys submitted the case to Judge Blair on Saturday morning.

The court heard the evidence on Saturday in the case of Harry A. Bishop vs. Musia I. Bishop. A suit for divorce.

Muggins—"Wigwag" thinks he ought to be in the army. He says he was born to command. "Bugs"—"Oh, many a man who was born to command marries a woman who was born to countermand."

Secretary Glass has made the official announcement of these terms.

With the last payment, of course, is due all accrued interest on deferred installments. And payment can be completed on any of the installment dates with the accrued interest to that date.

Could any salesman ask for anything easier to offer in the way of terms? The first real stiff payment doesn't come until August and the last payment is set way off there in November.

MUSTEROLE—QUICK RELIEF! NO BLISTER!

It Soothes and Relieves Like a Mustard Plaster Without the Burn or Sting

Musterole is a clean, white ointment, made with the oil of mustard. It does all the work of the old-fashioned mustard plaster—does it better and does not blister. You do not have to bother with a cloth. You simply rub it on—and usually the pain is gone!

Many doctors and nurses use Musterole and recommend it to their patients. They will gladly tell you what relief it gives from sore throat, bronchitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frostbites, colds of the chest (it often prevents pneumonia).

30c and 60c jars; hospital size $2.50.

AMERICANS MAKING GOOD AT SIXTY-FIVE

Don't worry about old age. A sound man is good at any age. Keep your body in good condition and you can be as hale and hearty and able to "do your bit" as when you were a young fellow.

Affections of the kidneys and bladder are among the leading causes of early or helpless age. Keep them clean and the other organs in working condition, and you will have nothing to fear.

Drive the poisonous wastes from the system and avoid uric acid accumulations. Take GOLD MEDAL Haarem Oil Capsules periodically and you will find that you are as good as the next fellow. Your spirits will be rejuvenated, your muscles strong and your mind keen enough for any task.

GOLD MEDAL Haarem Oil Capsules will do the work. But be sure to get the original imported GOLD MEDAL Haarem Oil Capsules. They are reliable and should help you, or your money will be refunded. For sale by most druggists. In sealed packages three sizes.

MAKE YOUR SHOES WEAR LONGER

Ten months ago, W. H. Kelley, a lumber salesman of Omaha, had a pair of shoes re-soled with Neolin Soles. Mr. Kelley does much walking and has worn these shoes constantly. He says "they are still good for another ten months of wear."

Good shoe stores carry Neolin-soled shoes in many styles for men, women and children. They cost you no more than shoes that give less wear. Neolin Soles are also available everywhere for re-soles. Remember—these soles are created by science to be what soles should be. They are comfortable and waterproof—as well as long-wearing. They are made by The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio, who also make Wingfoot Heels—guaranteed to outwear any other heels.

The Wife of a King

A Metamorphosis of the Gold Country of the Far North

By JACK LONDON

Copyright by Jack London

INCE, when the Northland was very young, the social and civic virtues were remarkable alike for their paucity and their simplicity. When the burden of domestic duties grew grievous, and the fireside mood expanded to a constant protest against its bleak loneliness, the adventurers from the Southland, in lieu of better, paid the stipulated prices and took unto themselves native wives. It was a forest of paradise to the women, for it must be confessed that the white rovers gave far better care and treatment to them than did their Indian co-partners. Of course, the white men themselves were satisfied with such deals, as were also the Indian men for that matter. Having sold their daughters and sisters for cotton blankets and obsolete rifles, and traded their warm furs for flimsy calico and bad whisky, the sons of the soil promptly and cheerfully succumbed to quick consumption and other swift diseases correlated with the blessings of a superior civilization.

It was in these days of Arcadian simplicity that Cal Galbraith journeyed through the land and fell sick on the Lower river. It was a refreshing advent in the lives of the good Sisters of the Holy Cross, who gave him shelter and medicine. Cal Galbraith became troubled with strange thoughts, which clamored for attention till he laid eyes on the Mission girl, Madeline. Yet he gave no sign, biding his time patiently. He strengthened with the coming spring, and when the sun rode the heavens in a golden circle, and the joy and throbs of life were in all the land, he gathered his still weak body together and departed.

Now Madeline, the mission girl, was an orphan. Her white father had failed to give a bald-faced grizzly the trail one day, and had died quickly. Then her Indian mother, having no man to fill the winter cache, had tried the hazardous experiment of waiting till the salmon run on fifty pounds of flour and half as many of bacon. After that the baby, Chook-ra, went to live with the good sisters, and to be thenceforth known by another name.

But Madeline still had kinfolk, the nearest being a dissolute uncle who outraged his vitals with inordinate quantities of the white man's whisky. He strove daily to walk with the gods, and incidentally his feet sought shorter trails to the grave. When sober he suffered exquisite torture. He had no conscience. To this ancient vagabond Cal Galbraith duly presented himself, and they consumed many words and much tobacco in the conversation that followed. Promises were also made; and in the end the old heathen took a few pounds of dried salmon and his birch-bark canoe, and paddled away to the Mission of the Holy Cross.

It is not given the world to know what promises he made and what lies he told—the sisters never gossip; but when he returned, upon his swarthy chest there was a brass crucifix, and in his canoe his niece Madeline. That night there was a grand wedding and a potlatch; so that for two days to follow there was no fishing done by the village. But in the morning Madeline shook the dust of the Lower river from her moccasins, and with her husband, in a poling boat, went to live on the Upper river in a place known as the Lower Country. And in the years which followed she was a good wife, sharing her husband's hardships and cooking his food. And she kept him in straight trails, till he learned to save his dust and to work nightly. In the end, he struck it rich, and built a cabin in Circle City; and his happiness was such that men who came to visit him in his home circle became restless at the sight of it and envied him greatly.

But the Northland began to mature, and social amenities to make their appearance. Hitherto, the Southland had sent forth its sons; but it now belched forth a new exodus, this time of its daughters. They did not fail to put new ideas in the heads of the men, and to elevate the tone of things in ways peculiarly their own. No more did the squaws gather at the dances, go roaring down the center in the good, old Virginia reels, or make merry with jolly "Dan Tucker." They fell back on their native stoicism, and uncomplainingly watched the rule of their white sisters from the caldins.

Then another exodus came over the mountains from the prolific Southland. This time it was of women that became mighty in the land. They frowned upon the Indian wives, while the other women became mild and walked humbly. There were cowards who became ashamed of their ancient covenants with the daughters of the soil, who looked with a new distaste upon their dark-skinned children; but there were also others—men—who remained true and proud of their aboriginal ways. When it became the fashion to divorce the native wives, Cal Galbraith retained his manhood, and in so doing felt the heavy hand of the women who had come last, knew least, but who ruled the land.

One day, the Upper Country, which lies far above Circle City, was pronounced rich. Dog teams carried the news to Salt Water; golden argosies freighted the lure across the North Pacific; wires and cables sang with the tidings; and the world heard for the first time of the Klondike river and the Yukon country.

Cal Galbraith had lived the years quietly. He had then been a good husband to Madeline, and she had blessed him. But somehow discontent fell upon him; he felt vague yearnings for his own kind, for the life he had been shut out from—a general sort of desire, which men sometimes feel, to break out and taste the prime of living. Besides, there drifted down the river wild rumors of the wonderful Eldorado, glowing descriptions of the city of legs and tents, and ludicrous accounts of the che-cha-quas who had rushed in and were stampeding the whole country. Circle City was dead. The world had moved on up river and become a new and most marvelous world.

Cal Galbraith grew restless on the edge of things, and wished to see with his own eyes. So, after the wash up, he weighed in a couple of hundred pounds of dust on the company's big scales, and took a draft for the same on Dawson. Then he put Tom Dixon in charge of his mines, kissed Madeline good-by, promised to be back before the first mush-ice ran, and took passage on an up-river steamer.

Madeline waited—waited through all the three months of daylight. She fed the dogs, gave much of her time to young Cal, watched the short summer fade away and the sun begin its long journey to the south. And she prayed much in the manner of the Sisters of the Holy Cross. The fall came, and with it there was much ice on the Yukon, and Circle City kings returning to the winter's work at their mines, but no Cal Galbraith. Tom Dixon received a letter, however, for his men slidded up her winter's supply of dry pine. The company received a letter, for its dog teams led her cache with their best provisions, and she was told that her credit was limitless.

Through all the ages man has been held the chief instigator of the woes of woman; but in this case the men held their tongues and swore harshly at one of their number who was away, while the women failed utterly to emulate them. So, without needless delay, Madeline heard strange tales of Cal Galbraith's doings; also, of a certain Greek dancer who played with men as children did with bubbles. Now Madeline was an Indian woman, and further, she had no woman friend to whom to go for wise counsel. She prayed and planned by turns, and that night, being quick of resolve and action, harnessed the dogs, and with young Cal securely lashed to the sled, stole away.

Though the Yukon still ran free, the eddy ice was growing, and each day saw the river dwindling to a slushy thread. Save him who has done the like, no man may know what she endured in traveling a hundred miles on the rim ice; nor may they understand the toll and hardship of breaking the two hundred miles of packed ice which remained after the river froze for good. But Madeline was an Indian woman, so she did these things, and one night there came a knock at Madeline Kid's door. There at he fed a team of starving dogs, put a healthy youngster to bed, and turned his attention to an exhausted woman. He removed her ice-bound moccasins while he listened to her tale, and stuck the point of his knife into her feet that he might see how far they were frozen.

Despite his tremendous virility, Madeline Kid was possessed of a softer, womanly element, which could win the confidence of a snarling wolf dog or draw confessions from the most wintry heart. Nor did he seek them. Hearts opened to him as spontaneously as flowers to the sun. Even the priest, Father Roubeau, had been known to confess to him, while the men and women of the Northland were ever knocking at his door, a door from which the latch-string hung always out. To Madeline, he could do no wrong, make no mistake. She had known him from the time she first cast her lot among the people of her father's race; and to her half-barbaric mind it seemed that in him was his vision and the future there could be no intervening veil.

There were false ideals in the land. The social strictures of Dawson were not synonymous with those of the previous era, and the swift maturity of the Northland involved much wrong. Madeline Kid was aware of this, and he had Cal Galbraith's measure accurately. He knew a hasty word was the father of much evil; besides, he was minded to teach a great lesson and bring shame upon the man. So Stanley Prince, the young mining expert, was called into the conference the following night, as was also Lucky Jack Harrington and his violin. That same night, Bettles, who owed a great debt to Madeline Kid, harnessed up Cal Galbraith's dogs, lashed Cal Galbraith, junior, to the sled, and slipped away in the dark for Stuart river.

"So; one—two—three, one—two—three. Now reverse! No, no! Start up again, Jack. See—this way." Prince executed the movement as one should who has led the cotillon.

"Now; one—two—three, one—two—three. Reverse! Ah! that's better. Try it again. I say, you know, you mustn't look at your feet. One—two—three, one—two—three. Shorter steps. You are not hanging to the gee-pole just now. Try it over. There! that's the way. One—two—three, one—two—three."

Round and round went Prince and Madeline in an interminable waltz. The table and stools had been shoved over against the wall to increase the room. Madeline Kid sat on the bunk, chin to knees, greatly interested. Jack Harrington sat beside him, scraping away on his violin and following the dancers.

It was a unique situation, the undertaking of these three men with the woman. The most pathetic part, perhaps, was the businesslike way in which they went about it. No athlete was ever trained more rigidly for a coming contest, nor wolf dog for the harness, than was she. But they had good material, for Madeline, unlike most women of her race, in her childhood had escaped the carrying of heavy burdens and the toll of the trail. Besides, she was a clean-limbed, willow creature, possessed of much grace which had not hitherto been realized. It was this grace which the men strove to bring out and knock into shape.

At the next intermission Prince discovered a new predicament.

"I say, Kid," he said, "we're wrong, all wrong. She can't learn in moccasins. Put her feet into slippers, and then on to that waxed floor—pshaw!"

Madeline raised a foot and regarded her shapeless house moccasin dubiously. In previous winters, both at Circle City and Forty Mile, she had danced many a night away with similar footgear, and there had been nothing the matter. But now—well, if there was anything wrong it was for Madeline Kid to know, not her.

But Madeline Kid did know, and he had a good eye for measures; so he put on his cap and mittens and went down the hill to pay Mrs. Eppingswell a call. Her husband, Clove Eppingswell, was prominent in the community as one of the great government officials. The kid had noted her slender little foot one night, at the governor's ball. And as he also knew her to be as sensible as she was pretty, it was no task to ask of her a certain small favor.

On his return, Madeline withdrew for a moment to the inner room. When she reappeared Prince was startled. "By Jove!" he gasped. "Who'd 'a' thought it! The little witch! Why, my sister!"

"Is an English girl," interrupted Madeline Kid, "with an English foot. This girl comes of a small-footed race. Moccasins just broadened her feet healthily, while she did not misshape them by running with the dogs in her childhood."

Madeline was the wife of a king, a king whose yellow treasure could buy outright a score of fashion's puppets; yet in all her life her feet had known no gear save red-tanned moosehide. At first she looked in awe at the tiny white satin slippers; but she quickly understood the admiration which shone, manlike, in the eyes of the men.

So the training went on. Every day Madeline Kid led the girl out on long walks devoted to the correction of her carriage and the shortening of her stride. There was little likelihood of her identity being discovered, for Cal Galbraith and the rest of the old-timers were like lost children among the many strangers who had rushed into.

the land. Besides, the frost of the North has a bitter tongue, and the tender women of the South, to shield their cheeks from its biting caresses, were prone to the use of the canvas masks. With faces obscured and bodies lost in squirrel-skin parkas, a mother and daughter, meeting on trail, would pass as strangers.

In this way Thanksgiving night drew near. At irregular intervals Bettles sent word down from Stuart river regarding the welfare of young Cal. The time of their return was approaching. More than once a casual caller, hearing dance music and the rhythmic pulse of feet, entered, only to find Harrington scraping away and the other two beating time or arguing noisily over a mooted step. Madeline was never in evidence, having precipitately fled to the inner room.

On one of these nights Cal Galbraith dropped in. Encouraging news had just come down from Stuart river, and Madeline had surpassed herself—not in walk alone, and carriage and grace, but in womanly roguishness. They had indulged in sharp repartee, and she had defended herself brilliantly; and then, yielding to the intoxication of the moment, and of her own power, she had bullied, and mastered, and wheedled, and patronized them with most astonishing success. And instinctively, involuntarily, they had bowed, not to her beauty, her wisdom, her wit, but to that indefinable something in woman to which man yields yet cannot name. The room was dizzy with sheer delight as she and Prince whirled through the last dance of the evening. Harrington was throwing in inconceivable flourishes, while Madeline Kid, utterly abandoned, had seized the broom and was executing mad gyrations on his own account.

At this instant the door shook with a heavy rap-rap, and their quick glances noted the lifting of the latch. But they had survived similar situations before. Harrington never broke a note, Madeline shot through the waiting door to the inner room. The broom went hurtling under the bank, and by the time Cal Galbraith and Louis Savoy got their heads in, Madeline Kid and Prince were in each other's arms, wildly scottisching down the room.

As a rule, Indian women do not make a practice of fainting on provocation, but Madeline came as near to it as she ever had in her life. For an hour she crouched on the floor, listening to the heavy voices of the men rumbling up and down in mimic thunder. Like familiar chords of childhood melodies, every intonation, every trick of her husband's voice, swept in upon her, fluttering her heart and weakening her knees till she lay half-fainting against the door. It was well she could neither see nor hear when he took his departure.

"When do you expect to go back to Circle City?" Madeline Kid asked simply.

"Haven't thought much about it," he replied, "Don't think till after the ice breaks."

"And Madeline?"

He flushed at the question, and there was a quick droop to his eyes. Madeline Kid could have despised him for that, had he known men less.

"I guess she's all right," the Circle City king answered hastily, and in an apologetic manner. "Tom Dixon" got charge of my interests, you know, and he sees to it that she has everything she wants."

Madeline Kid laid hand upon his arm, and hushed him suddenly. They had stepped without. Overhead, the aurora, a gorgeous wanton, flaunted miracles of color; beneath lay the sleeping town. Far below, a solitary dog gave tongue. The king again began to speak, but the Kid pressed his hand for silence. The sound multiplied. Dog after dog took up the strain till the full-throated chorus swayed the night.

Cal Galbraith shivered slightly as it died away in half-caught sob. The Kid read his thoughts openly, and wondered back with him through all the weary days of famine and disease; and with him was also the patient Madeline, sharing his pains and perils, never doubting, never complaining. His mind's rebus vibrated to a score of pictures, stern, clear-cut and the hand of the past drew back with heavy fingers on his heart. It was the psychological moment. Madeline Kid was half tempted to play his reserve card and win the game; but the lesson was too mild as yet, and he let it pass. The next instant they had gripped hands, and the king's beaded moccasins were drawing protests from the outraged snow as he crunched down the hill.

Madeline in collapse was another woman to the mischievous creature of an hour before, whose laughter had been so infectious and whose heightened color and flashing eyes had made her teachers for the while forget. Weak and nerveless, she sat in the chair just as she had been dropped there by Prince and Harrington. Madeline Kid frowned. This would never do. When the time of meeting her husband came to hand, she must carry things off with high-handed imperiousness. It was very necessary she should do it after the manner of white women, else the victory would be no victory at all. So he talked to her, sternly, without mincing of words, and initiated her into the weaknesses of his own sex, till she came to understand what simpletons men were after all, and why the word of their women was law.

A few days before Thanksgiving night, Madeline Kid made another call on Mrs. Eppingwell. She promptly overhauled her feminine fripperies, paid a protracted visit to the dry goods department of the P. C. company, and returned with the Kid to make Madeline's acquaintance. After that came a period such as the cabin had never seen before, and what with cutting, and fitting, and basting, and stitching, and numerous other wonderful and unknowable things, the male conspirators were more often banished the premises than not. At such times the opera house opened its double storm doors to them. So often did they put their heads together, and so deeply did they drink to curious toasts, that the youngsters scented unknown creeks of incalculable richness, and it is known that several che-chas-quas and at least one old timer kept their stampeding packs stored behind the bar, ready to hit the trail at a moment's notice.

Mrs. Eppingwell was a woman of capacity; so, when she turned Madeline over to her trainers on Thanksgiving night she was so transformed that they were almost afraid of her. Prince wrapped a Hudson Bay blanket about her with a mock reverence more real than feigned, while Madeline Kid whose arm she had taken, found it a severe trial to resume his wonted mentorship. Harrington, with the list of purchase still running through his head, dragged along in the rear, now opened his mouth once all the way down into the town. When they came to the back door of the opera house they took the blanket from Madeline's shoulders and spread it on the snow, slipping out of Prince's moccasins, she stepped upon it in new satin slippers. The masquerade was at its height. She hesitated, but they jerked open the door and shoved her in. Then they ran around to come in by the front entrance.

"Where is Freda?" the old timers questioned, while the che-chas-quas were equally energetic in asking who Freda was. The ballroom buzzed with her name. It was on everybody's lips. Grizzled "sour-dough boys," day laborers at the mines but proud of their degree, either patronized the spruce-looking tenderfeet and lied eloquently, the "sour-dough boys" being specially created to toy with truth, or gave them savage looks of indignation because of their ignorance. Perhaps forty kings of the Upper and Lower countries were on the floor, each deeming himself hot on the trail and studiously backing his judgment with the yellow dust of the realm. An assistant was sent to the man at the scales, upon whom had fallen the burden of weighing up the sacks, while several of the gamblers, with the rules of chance at their finger ends, made up alluring books on the field and favorites.

Which was Freda? Time and again the Greek dancer was thought to have been discovered, but each discovery brought panic to the betting ring and a frantic registering of new wagers by those who wished to hedge. Madeline Kid took an interest in the hunt, his advent being hailed uproariously by the revelers, who knew him to a man. The Kid had a good eye for the trick of a step, and ear for the lift of a voice, and private choice was a marvelous creature who scintillated as the "Aurora Borealis." But the Greek dancer was too subtle for even his penetration. The majority of the gold hunters seemed to have centered their verdict on the "Russian Princess," who was the most graceful in the room, and hence could be no other than Freda Motoc.

During a quadrille a roar of satisfaction went up. She was discovered. At previous balls, in the figure "all hands round," Freda had displayed an imitable step and variation peculiarly her own. As the figure was called, the "Russian Princess" gave the unique rhythm to limb and body. A chorus of "Hold-you-so's" shook the squared roof beams, when lo! it was noticed that the "Aurora Borealis" and another mask, the "Spirit of the Pole," were performing the same trick equally well. And when two twin "Sun Dogs" and a "Frost Queen" followed suit, a second assistant was dispatched to the aid of the man at the scales.

Bettles came off trail in the midst of the excitement, descending upon them in a hurricane of frost. His rhymed brows turned to cataracts as he whirled about; his mustache, still frozen, seemed gummed with diamonds and turned the light in varicolored rays; while the flying feet slipped on the chunks of ice which rattled from his moccasins and Scotch socks. A Northland dance is quite an informal affair, the men of the creeks and trails having lost whatever fastidiousness they may have at one time possessed; and only in the high official circles are conventions at all observed. Here, caste carried no significance. Millionaires and paupers, dog drivers and mounted policemen, joined hands with "ladies in the center," and swept around the circle performing most remarkable capers.

In his quest for the Greek dancer, Cal Galbraith managed to get into the same set with the "Russian Princess," toward whom popular suspicion had turned. But by the time he had guided her through one dance, he was willing not only to stake his millions that she was not Freda, but that he had had his arm about her waist before. When or where he could not tell, but the puzzling sense of familiarity so wrought upon him that he turned his attention to the discovery of her identity. Madeline Kid might have aided him instead of occasionally taking the "Princess" for a few turns and talking earnestly to her in low tones. But it was Jack Harrington who paid the "Russian Princess" the most audacious court. Once he drew Cal Galbraith aside and hazarded wild guesses as to who she was, and explained to him that he was going to win. This ruffled the Circle City king, and he forgot both Madeline and Freda in the new quest.

It was soon noised about that the "Russian Princess" was not Freda Motoc. Interest deepened. Here was a fresh enigma. They knew Freda though they could not find her, but here was somebody they had found and did not know. Even the women could not place her, and they knew every good dancer in the camp. Many took her for one of the official clique, indulging in a silly escapade. Not a few asserted she would disappear before the unmasking. Others were equally positive that she was the woman a reporter of the Kansas City "Sun" came to write them up at ninety dollars per column. And the men at the scales worked busily.

At one o'clock every couple took to the floor. The unmasking began amid laughter and delight, like that of care-free children. There was no end of oh's and ah's as mask after mask was lifted. The scintillating "Aurora Borealis" became the brawny negress whose income from washing the community's clothes ran at about five hundred a month. The twin "Sun Dogs" discovered mustaches on their upper lips, and were recognized as brother fraction kings of Eldorado. In one of the most prominent sets, and the slowest in uncovering, was Cal Galbraith with the "Spirit of the Pole." Opposite him was Jack Harrington and the "Russian Princess." The rest had discovered themselves, yet the Greek dancer was still missing. All eyes were upon the group. Cal Galbraith, in response to their cries, lifted his partner's mask. Freda's wonderful face and brilliant eyes flashed out upon them. A roar went up, to be hushed suddenly in the new and absorbing mystery of the "Russian Princess." Her face was still hidden, and Jack Harrington was struggling with her. The dancers tittered on the tips of expectancy. He crushed her dainty costume roughly, and then—and then the revelers exploded. The joke was on them. They had danced all night with a tabooed native woman.

But those that knew, and they were many, ceased abruptly, and a hush fell upon the room. Cal Galbraith crossed over with great strides, angrily, and spoke to Madeline in polyglot Chinook. But she retained her composure, apparently oblivious to the fact that she was the cynosure of all eyes, and answered him in English. She showed neither fright nor anger, and Madeline Kid chuckled at her well-bred equanimity. The king felt baffled, defeated; his common Siwash wife had passed beyond him.

"Come!" he said finally. "Come on home."

"I beg pardon," she replied; "I have agreed to go to supper with Mr. Harrington. Besides, there's no end of dances promised."

Harrington extended his arm to lead her away. He evinced not the slightest disinclination toward showing his back, but Madeline Kid had by this time edged in closer. The Circle City king was stunned. Twice his hand dropped to his belt, and twice the Kid gathered himself to spring; but the retreating couple passed safely through the supper-room door, where canned oysters were spread at five dollars the plate. The crowd sighed audibly, broke up into couples, and followed them. Freda pouted and went in with Cal Galbraith; but she had a good heart and a sure tongue, and she spoiled his oysters for him. What she said is of no importance, but his face went red and white. The supper room was filled with a pandemonium of voices, which ceased suddenly as Cal Galbraith stepped over to his wife's table. Since the unmasking, considerable weights of dust had been placed as to the outcome. Everybody watched with breathless interest. Harrington's blue eyes were steady, but under the overhanging tablecloth the latest in six-guns balanced on his knees. Madeline, looked up, casually, with little interest. "May—May I have the next round dance with you?" the king stammered. The wife of the king glanced at her card and inclined her head.

Licking County Soldiers and Sailors ARE HONORED BY Bring 'Em Back Club

Bring 'Em Back Clubs have been organized in Licking County in honor of 150 soldiers, sailors and marines. The number is growing from day to day. As each club is formed a letter goes from W. S. S. headquarters to the soldier or sailor, giving the organizer's name and a list of those who pledge to buy W. S. S. in his honor. The organizer receives a charter, signed by Governor Cox and State Director Wolfe, to present to the soldier upon his return, and the names of those who are complimented by the formation of these clubs are posted upon the Court House park bulletin boards. Clubs have been formed in honor of the following named men. Let's make it complete by organizing a club for every Licking county man in the service. It's easily done.

Let no Licking County Soldier, Sailor or Marine be forgotten. Let's honor every man with membership in the "Bring 'Em Back" Clubs of Ohio

HOW TO START A CLUB

Obtain application blanks from the local committee, Auto. phone 23124. The organizer may himself buy 100 to 200 W. S. S. (April price $4.15) or may secure pledges from others. It takes 100 W. S. S. to form a club. The stamps may be bought now or at any time this year. After the purchase of 100 W. S. S. is pledged, send the papers to the W. S. S. committee, which will do the rest. Start a club now for that soldier or sailor friend or relative. If you don't know a soldier or sailor, ask the W. S. S. committee for a list of names.

Remember the best investment in the world today is W. S. S. They are not taxable, pay 4.27% interest, and your money back upon 10 days' notice. W. S. S. never go below par.

ARMY STRENGTH BELOW 2 MILLIONS
Million Seven Hundred Thousand Have Been Returned to Civil Life By Demobilization.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM)
Washington, April 12.—Demobilization has reduced the total strength of the American army below two million. Complete reports to April 8 announced today by General March showed the aggregate strength on that date to be 1,980,506.
Since November 11, 686,114 men have sailed for home, and up to April 8th, 665,772 had been landed. There have been returned to civil life 1,701,469 of officers and men, fifty per cent. of the officers and 46 per cent. of the men who were in the army when the armistice was signed. Discharge orders now total 1,925,000.

HAS PART IN BIG BATTLES OF WAR
Piper Harry Matthews, Veteran of British Expeditionary Force, Returns To Home Here.

Bagpiper Harry Matthews, son of Mrs. George Karloof of East Main street, who has served with the Scotch Highlanders, since April 1, 1917, has arrived at his home here.
Wearing the picturesque uniform of the Highlanders, he reached Newark today. He was discharged on Tuesday at London, Ontario. Bagpiper Matthews enlisted in Canada on April 1, 1917 and sailed on the 27th of that month for England. He was trained at West Sandling, Eng., and took part in most of the big battles. The first was the taking of Hill 70 on August 15, 1917, then the capture of Passchendaele Ridge, in Belgium, in October and November 1917.

With his regiment the 48th Highlanders he took part in the offensive of August 1918 and at that time the bagpipers played the attacking party over the top.
The last battle in which he participated was the breaking of the Hindenburg line in the front of Aisne in September 1918.
The bagpipers were armed with revolver when they were sent over the top but as to general equipment, they only carry a kilt.
COMMITTEE TO TALK PEACE.
Issued on Wednesday.
Berlin, Friday, April 11.—The German national assembly established a committee of 28 members which will be charged with the duty of carrying on peace negotiations.
